

Dave's Blarg!

2011-Nov-09

Today started out early (as usual ☺) I picked up the Sitts for a ride to school at 0630. Work was actually pretty entertaining today; I was going through resumes for some internships. Here are a few things I have to say about hiring (now that I'm the one doing it) :D

- I don't care what your email address is. I only even really read one email address today, it was a funny one and I laughed, then

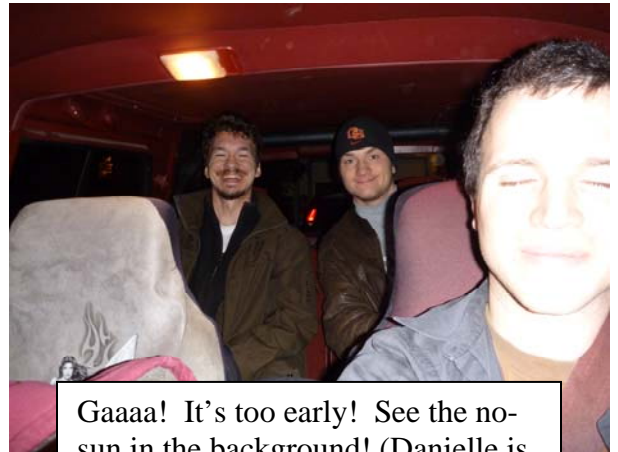

I got on to evaluating what actual skills and abilities the applicant had. I've heard that there are places where you can get rejected for having an unprofessional address. Unless it's [unprintable noun][unprintable action]666@IAmANutCase.com, I really don't care, you get issued an address when you get hired.

- I didn't facebook any of the applicants. I don't really care what's on their facebook account; if it's anything like mine it shows that they're just about as crazy as the rest of us.

- Spell check really doesn't catch everything! A common piece of equipment in the fleet is a "Winch", but we may or may not have gotten an application from a "Skilled Wench Operator" (which should not be construed to give the impression that the applicant didn't get a (very) good rating ☺)

The Dead Motor Vehicles Office

Gaaaa! It's too early! See the no-sun in the background! (Danielle is hiding from the no-sun)

After that things got even more exciting! I've found my wallet, but my license has been in rough shape for a while, and I'd already gotten all the paperwork together, so I figured I'd head out to the DMV to get a new one. I really shouldn't pick honestly. I think that the Corvallis DMV exists in some sort of random alternate reality, my total time (not that anyone is counting) was almost exactly 12:38 from door to door. Every time I've ever been there it's been a surprise how fast it was, that being said I'm sure that the first time I don't bring a book they'll slip back into this universe and I'll spend an hour waiting while the office specialists talk about their cats :p

Penny is helping me sort resumes ☺

The afternoon was awesome! I had an extra special visitor! Nick dropped penny off to help me for a while! She was a huge hand all afternoon ☺

Penny thinks that this box looks better over here... (we are still moving into this shop..)

"They left you alone with Penny?"

And the afternoon just got better
And better, Curly Dave, Danielle, Nick, and Elizabeth all stopped in to say hi ☺ As office days go, that's about as good as it gets ☺ Okay, one special prize to whoever writes back with the craziest office (or other work) day story ☺. Until Tomorrow! -Dave

I might need a bigger office ☺